About this event

Course Description: Using the example of neuropsychological testing of Hispanics (including death penalty situations), this pre-recorded* event reviews the growing disparity between professional psychology in the US with the demographics of the population it seeks to understand and serve; explores how the increasing disparity can result in a series of clinical and ethical challenges ranging from misdiagnosing to questions of professional competence; and, presents mitigation strategies when faced with these challenges.

Objectives:

Participants will:

1. understand the demographics of both professional psychology and the United States.
2. appreciate the difficulties and their potential solutions to the emerging disparity.
3. become more understanding of how to both handle these situations and how to help prepare the field for a future that will be drastically different than psychology has prepared for.

Course Sponsorship and Credit: This activity is sponsored by the LSBEP and approved for 2 hours of continuing education in ethics for Louisiana Licensed Psychologists, Louisiana Provisionally Licensed Psychologists and Louisiana Licensed Specialists in School Psychology. Others, please check with your respective board for acceptable credit.
